This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

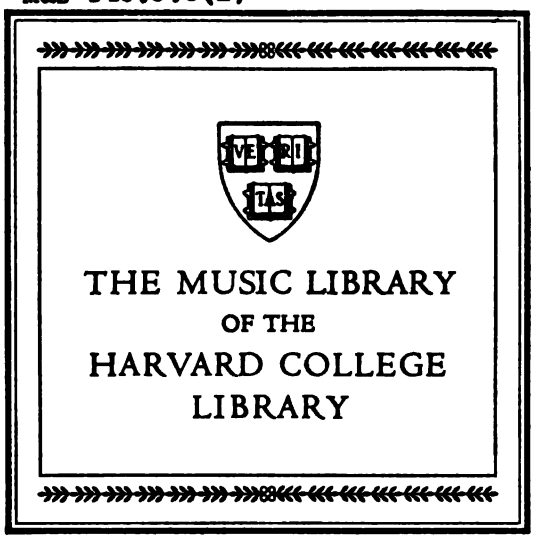
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at `http://books.google.com/`

Digitized by Google

Mus 546.3.8(1)



Digitized by Google

DATE DUE

APR 2 1 1988

FEB 0 4 1987

GAYLORD PRINTED IN U.S.A.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

MASTERS OF RUSSIAN SONG

Collected and Edited by KURT SCHINDLER

◆

The English versions by George Harris, Jr., Deems Taylor, Sigmund Spaeth and Kurt Schindler

◆

Vol. I. Twenty-five songs by Moussórgsky
Vol. II. Twenty-five songs by Balákireff, Tchaïkovsky, Rimsky-Kórsakoff, Borodíne, Gretchanínoff and Rachmáninoff.

◆

Paper edition, $1.25 net each volume
Both volumes bound in one in cloth, gilt, $3.50 net

New York · G. SCHIRMER · Boston

Digitized by Google

M1. S95.S.8 (1)

Copyright, 1917. by G. Schirmer

HARVARD UNIVERSITY

DEC 9 1966

EDA KUHN LOEB MUSIC LIBRARY

Digitized by Google

PREFACE

This volume of twenty-five songs by Moussórgsky is offered to the public of America and all other English-speaking countries with the earnest hope that it may definitely and lastingly contribute to the appreciation and understanding of this greatest of innovators and prophets in modern music. While the success of his historical opera "Boris Godounoff" has firmly established his name with American opera-goers, and while the serene and lofty strains of his other operatic work, "Khovánshtchina," have found many admirers among those privileged to attend its few performances in Russian at Drury Lane, yet for several reasons Moussórgsky's operas do not permit a complete evaluation of his genius; first of all, because in dealing with subjects that picture to a large extent the life of the Russian people in its manifold aspects, Moussórgsky's fanatical love of veracity, coupled with a purposeful idealism that verged upon self-abnegation, induced him to let the people speak in their own medium, the Russian folk-song, which he knew how to incorporate in his work as no other before or after him (and we must admit that no "composed" substitute would have been as good). Another reason why a critique based solely upon these operas must lack in accuracy, is, that both works have been largely made over by Rimsky-Kórsakoff, not only in orchestration but also in the building of Ensemble-scenes and Finales. That this was done with the fine theatrical sense of a great practitioner as well as with the delicate tact of a friend, no one can deny, nor that Rimsky's brilliant orchestration and climaxes certainly hastened the recognition of these operas; yet for those who know the sum of Rimsky's own operatic work, there is little doubt as to where, in "Boris" and "Khovánshtchina," the original stops and the retouche begins. A certain rectangular, pompous, over-regular style, an unnecessary polyphony, and a taint of conventionality, from which Rimsky was not altogether free, creep in from time to time; and for the most part one can easily distinguish the true from the "edited" Moussórgsky. This task will be especially facilitated by a perusal of his songs, because there one never finds a trace of conventionality, never a line too much, rather a desire to say the most possible with the simplest means—almost sketch-like at times—finally, a meticulous attention to correct declamation down to the reproduction of the minutest inflections of the spoken word.

A contemporary of Wagner, Moussórgsky has solved in his own way—without much theorizing—the problem of musical declamation, being led merely by his desire to be absolutely true to life. The guiding advice of his elder friend, Balákireff (who foresaw this development), a rare gift for acoustical observation, scrupulous studies, and an unerring steadfastness of purpose, thus led Moussórgsky to find his own mode of expression, which is unlike any other's. It is not a style, not a pattern, but is new and reborn with every new problem which he attacks. It is so free, so intangible, so without compromise and convention, that one stands before his creations amazed, as before Nature herself.

Digitized by Google

The key to Moussórgsky's work is the spiritual personality of the man himself; that is why he cannot be imitated. If certain pages in Debussy's scores have similar melodic contours or harmonies, they are so much amalgamated with this Frenchman's peculiar style, that the idea of imitation is out of the question. The point is that Debussy is essentially a man of style, of patterns, of an individual, hyper-civilized musical vision (I say this in no derogatory sense). This is in direct opposition to the genius of Moussórgsky, who is rugged, frank, untrammeled, and who strikes at the very roots of things, laying open their inmost soul and letting it speak for itself, free of all personal admixture; an "impressionist" of the soul, in fact, if one dare thus freely apply the name of the painter-school of Manet and Monet to a musician, inasmuch as the revolutionizing process, the gradual evolving of a new ideal of expression, is much the same in both cases.

The only one of the younger Russian school who is called a disciple of Moussórgsky, by reason of the freedom and audacity of his conceptions, Igor Stravínsky, is, however, far from the roots and mainsprings of Moussórgsky's art. His extraordinary technique leads him to an external, kaleidoscopic portrayal of life, quite unlike the direct simplicity, the power of divination of the master.

To study Moussórgsky's work is a profound experience in a musician's life, one likely to revolutionize not only accepted musical standards, but also to enlarge his vision of the spiritual and psychic powers of music. It is futile to argue, as many of Moussórgsky's contemporaries did, that he lacked technique, that his artistic equipment was amateurish, that his originality was freakishness. We who are able to envisage the entire field of his life's work, and to gauge the tremendous seriousness and achievement of it, can appreciate the sum of its energy, the unerring logic of it all, the long path of self-development that he travelled.—Moussórgsky was young enough, when he took up music as a career, to assimilate all the classical technique of music, if he had so desired. But his conviction was bent upon finding his own way, free from all convention, to express all the emotions of the human heart as faithfully to nature as possible. And so he began his way, at first stumbling and staggering, often rugged and uncouth in his work, but finally arriving at heights of overpowering directness and lucidity. Thus his life's achievement stands before us completed in a Rembrandtian chiaroscuro, with the high lights always placed where they lay bare the essential life of the soul. This is why his songs are such revelations of psychology, and why the character of Boris Godounoff or of Dosifiéï and Marfa in "Khovánshtchina" affect audiences with the direct power of Shakespearian drama.

27749

Digitized by Google

Moussórgsky's songs constitute the bulk and mainstay of his artistic bequest. Besides these, and the two completed operas, he wrote only two operatic fragments ("The Fair of Sorótchinsk" and "The Wedding"); a small number of less significant piano-pieces, an orchestral fantasy, and a few choral works (among them the superb biblical cantata "Joshua"). But among the songs there is a wide variety, and here we find the Moussórgsky who uncovers the soul of his art in all its purity. Here he is usually free from the influence of the Russian folk-song, which otherwise so engrossingly preoccupied him as to become almost a part of his own self. The collections comprising the four "Songs and Dances of Death" and the six songs of the cycle "Without Sunlight" show us the quintessence of Moussórgsky. They were written during the darkest period of his life, after his opera "Boris" had, despite its success, been banished from the stage because of political intrigue, and while he was living in poverty and seclusion with his poet-friend, Count Golénishtcheff-Kutóozoff. Here we find a descriptive power uncanny in its visual correctness; melodic lines of undreamt-of boldness; harmonies that none other heard or felt before him; and a masterful handling of technical resources and of declamation.

Probably no layman can imagine the difficulty of translating these strange and powerful musical incarnations into poetic or even adequate English. This, then, being the first time that these song-cycles are given in English versions, no effort was spared by my collaborators and myself to render them as perfectly as possible; many a poem in this volume has been translated four or five times, before one compound version was deemed acceptable.

I was singularly fortunate in having as my collaborators such men of both musical and literary ability as Messrs. George Harris, Jr., and Deems Taylor; while for the correctness of the translation my wife (herself a Russian) and myself stand sponsors. Thus I can vouch for the conscientiousness with which the attempt has been made to render every shade of the literary meaning into English idiom, as well as for the scrupulous care taken to have everything singable and correctly accented. Being myself a hearty believer in the use of the English language for song-recitals—since non-understanding or half-understanding on the part of the audience kills the very sense of such entertainments—I find it especially needed in the case of Moussórgsky's songs, where word and music form the most intimate union, and where the one conveys nothing without the other. Apart from this, the use of French, German, or even Italian translations seems quite inappropriate before an English-speaking audience, as I said, six years ago, in the preface to "A Century of Russian Song." This earlier collection, which has so effectively instilled a love for Russian Song in America, already contained eleven songs by Moussórgsky, which of course have not been included in the present volume. Interested musicians may want to consult these, especially as they will find among them one additional song from each of the afore-mentioned song-cycles, which could not well be included here.

27749

Digitized by Google

All periods of Moussórgsky's productivity from 1857 to about 1880, are represented in this new collection. The years of the forming of his personality (1865-67), when he lived in the country near Pskoff, and observed and analyzed the melodies and unconscious musical expressions of the peasants all around him, are especially featured; the "Orphan Girl," the "Love-Song of the Idiot," the "Magpie," and the biblical "Song of Solomon" (noted down from the lips of Jewish peasants), are among the first-fruits of this period of observation, during which he was bent upon deeper psychology and expression; written during this same period, songs like "The Bank of the Don" and the "Country Feast" attest to his happy gift of description.

The humorous side of Moussórgsky, which is such an essential and unique feature of his work, is represented by the excruciatingly funny adventures of the young Latin scholar (the Seminarian), by the Doll's Cradle-Song, and finally by the dances of Parásha and Khivria (from the Little-Russian opera-fragment "The Fair of Sorótchinsk"). Little-Russian melodies, so different in kind from the Northern Russian music, attracted Moussórgsky's attention frequently, and his "Dnyéper-Song" is the very embodiment of the proud, fiery music of the Cossacks. The "Revery of the Young Peasant," and the song "Little Star so bright," in their close affinity to the pure Russian folk-song, show how deeply the composer had entered into and comprehended the soul of the Russian peasant. Finally, two battle-songs stand out from all the rest as towering creations of vital import to our war-ridden age. "After the Battle," the ballad of the lonely soldier who dies far from wife and child, is impressive beyond description. With a simple but inexorable rhythm, with harsh and pitilessly logical harmonies, the grim picture is evoked. Moussórgsky was inspired to write it after seeing Verestchágin's painting of the same subject at a picture exhibit. Tsar Alexander II, who visited the same gallery a few days later, was so violently affected by the picture's strong realism, that the painter, out of deference to the Tsar, destroyed his own work. The tone-picture, however, that it inspired in Moussórgsky lives on with us, as one of the most powerful delineations in modern music. And what shall we call the song of "Death the Commander," if not the very incarnation in music of the horror of War?

The last number of this volume—not strictly a song, but a dramatic excerpt of melodies from the opera "Khovánshtchina"—was included to illustrate the ultimate period of the composer's creativeness, and the strains of sublime mysticism which his genius could then evoke. Marfa, a young fanatic belonging to the sect of "Old-Believers," finds herself cut off by the enemy's troops in a dense forest, with her co-sectarians, who choose to die on a funeral pyre rather than surrender. In the supreme moment Prince Khovansky, son of a dethroned Boïar, but dearly beloved by Marfa, joins her in the forest; and she, inspired with the spirit of self-immolation, bids him die with her, and consecrates him with the "Hallelujah of Love," while slowly circling about him with a lighted candle in each upraised hand. This scene belongs to the most sublime that can be seen on the stage, and the music reveals the mystic and divine powers of the soul. Americans have the right to know of it, even though the Metropolitan opera-stage still continues to bar the opera itself. That is why it was chosen to end this book.

27749

Digitized by Google

I cannot close this introductory note without once more expressing my thanks and indebtedness to Messrs. George Harris, Jr., and Deems Taylor for the unfaltering patience and painstaking labor by which they have made it possible for me to present this volume and its companion (twenty-five songs by Balákireff, Tchaïkovsky, Borodíne, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Gretchanínoff and Rachmáninoff). It was their conviction as well as mine that we were trustees of an important bequest to the American public, and it was in this spirit of earnest devotion that all obstacles were approached.

Stony Brook, L. I., KURT SCHINDLER.
August 26, 1917.

27749

Digitized by Google

Short Explanatory Notes

No. 4. The Country Feast. The frequent changes of rhythm need not disturb any singers. The song drawls on slowly and easily, with no change of the basic quarter-note. The interpretation has to consist mainly in bringing out the broad humor of the words, observing all the marks for expression and dynamics. In winter-time the Russian peasants wear clumsy furs and boots, and there is much pomp and ceremony in their festivities. Hence the heavy rhythm, which is in reality the rare $\frac{11}{4}$, known only in Russian folk-song (compare the Finale of "Snyegóurotchka," with its pompous Hymn to the Sun).

No. 5. Love-Song of the Idiot. One day in the country Moussórgsky witnessed a strange scene, which passed directly beneath his window. The village simpleton ("Yuródivui," as he is called in Russia), a poor half-witted wretch, was confronting one of the village belles, pouring out in breathless, pleading accents his long-repressed love for her. There was a touching, imploring chant, a real melody, in his voice, and the fascinated listener jotted down, unheeded, the intonations of the poor boy. From this sketch grew the song, which can be correctly interpreted only when the same tone of pleading, relentless, hopeless despair is employed by the singer. In spite of all their mockery, the Russian peasants have a superstitious reverence for their "Yuródivui," to whom they impute the power of second sight.

No. 6. The Orphan Girl. This tune was likewise culled from the lips of peasants. Although I never doubted the fact (not chronicled elsewhere by Moussórgsky's biographers), I was able recently to establish it, when perusing a Russian museum-publication on the songs of the "Kalíki perekhózhie," the wandering beggar-groups of Russia. There I found the music of a typical beggar-verse ("Stikh níshtchikh") with the same rhythm and melodic outline as this Orphan Song. It begins, "May the Lord be kind to you, you and all your ancestors!"

No. 7. The Seminarian. Latin students the world over have to "cram their heads" with the famous list of exceptional masculine nouns "Panis, piscis, crinis, finis"; and it may be taken for granted that a goodly proportion of the public understands the dread that these words evoke in young scholars. One feature of the humor of this song may escape the attention of those who have never attended services of the Russian Orthodox Church. The middle section, describing the holy mass, down to the point where the Seminarian intones a psalm "in the sixth liturgic mode," is actually written in the modal sequences of the so-called sixth tone of the Russian Liturgy. For those unfamiliar with the institutions of the Russian Church, be it explained that "Father Simeon" is a lay priest, a "Pope," and consequently is allowed to marry, and to have a beautiful daughter.

Digitized by Google

No. 13. Death's Lullaby. As in Schubert's "Death and the Maiden," it is necessary that the interpreter should use different intonations for the pleading of the mother and for the cold, inexorable answers of Death. Especially important is this change of voice for the icy "No!" which cuts off the heart-cry of the mother (last page but one).

No. 15. Death the Commander. In the last nine bars Death dances a Trepák, the accentuated Russian peasant-dance.

No. 17. Silently Floated a Spirit. An early counterpart to Rossetti's "Blessed Damozel," one of the few pure lyrics in Moussórgsky's work.

No. 18. The Doll's Cradle Song. Moussórgsky took delight in reproducing all the dainty, minute inflections of the child's voice. In singing it, one should try to imitate the melodious drawl of the youngster, almost relapsing into speech at the end.

No. 19. Night. An early work, and one of the few erotic lyrics from Moussórgsky's pen. It has a particularly fine sweep and much subtle detail; the spirit of Púshkin and Turgénieff breathes in it. The name of the author of the poem is not given.

No. 22. Retrospect. Mark the extraordinary movement of triplets in the visionary middle part! This device was adopted by Debussy in "Pelléas."

No. 23. Resignation. Mark the keen incisiveness of the harmonies and the power of saying much with small means, as if sketching!

No. 24. Elegy. This song is very difficult to interpret. It needs supreme poise and a great gift for contrast on the part of both singer and pianist. Keep the first page and a half very quiet, the next-following one and a half page fleeting, shadowy, restless; then, after a short episode of sweet reminiscence, a rising whirlwind of shadows sweeps on, finally sinking down into itself like a fire-brand that is extinguished. "The great sad bell of Death" rings, as from an unseen monastery, and all ends in a dim haze of twilight.

No. 25. Consecration. The first page and a half, and the entire end of this number, are taken from the last (4th) act of the opera. The middle section (which in the last act returns only as a short reminiscence) is given in its full form as found in the 3d act.

27749

Digitized by Google

Index of Titles

After the Battle. (Baritone) 3

After Years. (Baritone) 98

A Phantasy. (Tenor) 90

Banks of the Don (The). (Mezzo or Baritone) 50

Consecration. (Dram. Mezzo or Contralto) 113

Country Feast (The). (Baritone) 14

Death's Lullaby. (Mezzo or Contralto) 60

Death's Serenade. (Mezzo or Baritone) 66

Death, the Commander. (Tenor) 72

Doll's Cradle-Song (The). (Mezzo or Soprano) 87

Elegy. (Baritone) 107

Hallelujah of Love. (Dram. Mezzo or Contralto) 113

In My Attic. (Baritone) 96

Little Star so Bright. (Soprano) 6

Love-Song of the Idiot. (Baritone) 18

Magpie (The) and the Little Gypsy Dancer. (Mezzo) 9

On the River Dnyéper. (Tenor) 54

Orphan Girl (The). (Mezzo) 22

Parásha's Revery and Dance. (Soprano) 44

Resignation. (Baritone) 104

Retrospect. (Baritone) 100

Revery of the Young Peasant. (Tenor) 40

Seminarian (The). (Baritone) 25

Silently Floated a Spirit. (Any voice) 83

Song of Khívria (The). (Mezzo) 32

Song of Solomon (The). (Tenor or Soprano) 80

Digitized by Google

Index of First Lines

As the wild rose am I 80

By the Don a flow'ry lane 50

Deep shadows veil the night 107

Dnyéper, ho! Dnyéper, hark! 54

Faintly the child sighs 60

Father! love is my only sin 113

Grieve no longer, my belovèd 44

He met his death in foreign land 3

Just look upon me! 32

Last night, in the crowd, you ignored me 98

Little star so bright 6

Lone in my little room 96

My heart, why weepest thou? 40

Oh, Mister, please be good! 22

O my Sávishna 18

Panis, piscis, crinis, finis 25

Resign! thou art but born to weary 104

Silently floated a spirit 83

Sweet-scented breath of Night 66

The vain and noisy day is done 100

They had opened wide the mighty doors of oak 14

Thro' my garden wicket hopping 9

Thy gracious image spreads upon me its enchantment 90

Tiapa, bye-bye 87

With crash of battle, armor gleaming 72

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

After the Battle

A BALLAD

(Balláda)

English version* by Geo. Harris, Jr., and Kurt Schindler

Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1874)

Alla marcia. Sostenuto, ma non troppo

Voice

Piano

He met his death in for - eign land, In sf p pesante

bit - ter fight - ing, hand to hand; His friends have won the vic - to - ry, And

cresc.

they are shout-ing. On-ly he, For - got-ten un-der-neath the skies, A - lone he lies. And

dim. sf

* Original poem by Count A. Golénishtcheff - Kutoözoff (after the destroyed picture by Vassili V. Vereshtchágin).

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

down there sweeps a greed-y crow To drink his blood that still doth flow, He picks his eyes that still do glow'r With death-ly glance in death's own hour; He drinks his fill, he leaves his prey And flies a-way. A-far at home a-cross the wild

Digitized by Google

One lone-ly moth-er rocks her child: "Be still, be still!

cresc. p

ah! shed no tear, For soon your fa - ther will be

dim. dim.

here, And then we shall have pies and cake, That I shall

rall.

bake."— Be - neath dark skies A - lone he lies.

ppp

Ped. *

Digitized by Google

Little Star So Bright

(Gdye tui zvyózdotchka?)

English version by Deems Taylor and
Kurt Schindler

Words and Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1857)
Posthumous work, revised by V. G. Karatuigin

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

black of night?

Where art thou, maid-en fair, With thy locks of gold-en hair? Hast forsak-en thy love, hast thou left him in de-spair, Him, so true and so brave, true beyond com - pare?

Digitized by Google

Now the star is hid by the black cloud deep; In her lone-ly grave lies the maid, a - - sleep.

Digitized by Google

The Magpie and the Little Gypsy Dancer

A HUMORESQUE

(Soróka)

English version by Kurt Schindler

After the poem by Pushkin

Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1867)

Allegretto non troppo

Voice

Piano

p staccato

Thro' my gar-den wick-et hop-ping,

mf sf p pp p sf p

Who comes chatt'ring bright and gay? 'Tis the mag-pie, she's a pro-phet, She an-nounc-es

p sf p sf p sf sf guests to-day. In the morn-ing air a-tink-ling Sound a my-riad crys-tal bells;

p sf p pp

2 Ped.

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

mf

Pur - ple slants the sun - light, sil - ver Lies on snow - clad

p

Allegro

hills and dells. Chimes are float - ing thro' the air: Lo, I see a p pp p

mf

mar-ket - square, Lads and maid - ens, young and old, Come to see the vil - lage fair.

mf f mf sf

p

In their midst a Gyp - sy danc - es, Cast - ing round co - quet - tish glanc - es,

p

Digitized by Google

Beats her tam-bou-rine so spright-ly, Waves her ker-chief to the throng,

Skip-ping, trip-ping, smil-ing bright-ly; Then in-tones her lit-tle song:

"Hark, good peo-ple, to my songs, and lis-ten well, By my cards your for-tunes let me tell!"

Digitized by Google

Tempo I°

p staccato

And the mag-pie still is hop-ping, Chat - t'ring, bab-bling, bright and gay;—

pp

mf

She's an - oth - er lit - tle Gyp - sy, She's a pro - phet in her way.—

sf p sf p sf sf sf

p

In the morn - ing air a - tink - ling Sound a my - riad

pp

2 Ped.

mf

crys - tal bells, And the sun - light— sheds its

p

Digitized by Google

sil - ver O - ver snow - clad hills and dells

Allegro

While the lit - tle Gyp - sy danc - es, Cast - ing round co - quet - tish glanc - es:

"Hark, good peo - ple, to my songs, and lis - ten well,

By my cards your for - tunes let me tell!"

Digitized by Google

The Country Feast

(Peerŏŏshka)

Poem by Koltzóff
English version by
Geo. Harris, Jr.

Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1867)

Tranquillo
Voice
Piano
They had o-pened wide the might-y doors of oak;
Some on horse and some in sleds the guests ar-rived. In sa-lute the host and host-ess bowed to them; From the court they led them to the light-ed hall,

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

Where they knelt be - fore the sa - cred im - a - ges,

pp

mf

Then as - sem - bled round the ta - bles rich - ly decked,— mf sf sf

f

And up - on the oak - en bench - es sat them down.

mf p sf p

Digitized by Google

In a hand-some dress of mus-lin trimm'd with fringe, The young wife, en-dear-ing

cresc. p p mf

with her soft black eyes, Moved a - mong the guests with mf cresc. cresc. mf

cresc.

kiss - es for them all, Of - f'ring them the bowl of hos - pi - tal - i - ty;

p cresc. mf f nf

While the host him - self dipp'd out the foam - ing beer

p mf f p mf sf

Digitized by Google

With a spoon em-boss'd with le-gends of his house, And the mas-ter's daugh-ter, pass-ing mead to them, Went a-mong the guests with her sweet, child-like smile.

Thus the guests did eat and drink and laugh and talk From the close of day until the mid-night hour.

Digitized by Google

To César Cui

Love-Song of the Idiot

(Svyétik Sávishna [Yuródivuĭ])

English version by
Geo. Harris, Jr., and
Kurt Schindler

Words and Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1865)

Allegro

Voice

Piano

O my Sá - vish - na,

Bright-eyed fal - con mine, Give thy love to me, Though a fool I be!

See how poor I am, Long for thy ca - ress! O my love - ly bird,

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

Bright - eyed fal - con mine, Love - ly Sá - vish - na, My I - vá - nov - na!

Scorn me not for my Na - ked mis - er - y, Scorn me not for my Fate un - for - tu - nate! See, the peo - ple laugh At my ug - ly shape,

See how curst I am By their mock - er - y! And the pass - ers - by

Digitized by Google

Call me weak of mind, And they bow and laugh At God's ho - ly fool;

Love - ly Sá - vish - na, My I - vá - nov - na! With their feet they kick Me, the ho - ly fool,

With their fists they rain Blows up - on my head. But on hol - i - days, When the peo - ple feast,

And a - dorn them-selves With red rib - bons gay, Then they kind - ly throw Bits of bread to me,

Digitized by Google

They do not for-get God's own ho-ly fool. Love-ly Sá-vish-na, Bright-eyed fal-con mine!

Love me, e-ven though I'm not beau-ti-ful, Love me, com-fort me In my lone-li-ness!

How I long for thee I could nev-er tell! Love-ly Sá-vish-na, Trust, or trust me not,

My I - vá - nov - na!

Digitized by Google

The Orphan-Girl

(Sirótka)

English version by
Geo. Harris, Jr., and
Kurt Schindler

Words and Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1868)

Andante (alla breve)

Voice

Piano

Oh, Mis-ter, please be good! Dear Mis-ter, please be kind!

Please let me tell to you, I am an or - phan, a home - less child!

Hear what I say! Hun-ger and cold have been sup-per and bed for me,

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

Night was my shel - ter and snow was my cov - er - let; All the peo-ple scold - ed me and sent me a - way in tears,— Scorn was the one re - ply—

That I re - ceiv'd in my mis - er - y. Oft in the for - est I hide my-self, sad and lone - ly, Then hun-ger calls me and makes me re - turn a - gain. My strength is gone, I must eat, I must drink once more!

Digitized by Google

Oh, Mis - ter, please help me! Dear Mis - ter, have pit - y! Let me not die of hun - ger! Let me not freeze to death! Dear Mis-ter, please help me!

Please let me tell to you, I am an or - phan, a home-less child!

Digitized by Google

The Seminarian

(Seminarist)

A HUMORESQUE

English version by Deems Taylor and
Kurt Schindler

Words and Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1866)

Allegro moderato

Voice

Piano

p f

Pa-nis, pis-cis, cri-nis, fi-nis; ig-nis, la-pis, pul-vis, ci-nis... Oh, these

mf p

Lat - in words! they drive me mad! Or-bis, am-nis et ca-na-lis, or-bis, am-nis et ca-na-lis.

dim. p

f mf

Such grim bless - ing from the priest I've had! How he cuff'd and f mf f sf

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

kick'd me, gave me— man-ya—bruise and scrape, With his ho - ly—hand he near-ly— knock'd me out- of shape!

Fas-cis, a-xis, fu-nis, en-sis; fus-tis, ves-tis, ver-mis, men-sis.

Fa-ther Sim-eon— has- a— daugh-ter, such a sweet, de - mure one!

Digitized by Google

p

She has cheeks as red as pop-pies, lan - guid eyes that lure one;

p

cresc.

mf

p

Crim-son is the smock that hides her waist so slen-der, Snow-y white her bos - om,

mf

p

f

swel-ling smooth and ten-der. Fas-cis, a-xis, fu-nis, en-sis; fus-tis, ves-tis, ver-mis, men-sis...

f

ff

Ah, my Stio-sha, lit - tle dar - ling! How I'd dear-ly love to hold you, To

ff

Digitized by Google

kiss you mad-ly, in my lov-ing arms to en - fold you!

dim. dim. mf dim. p

p pp p

Pos-tis, fol-lis, cu-cu-mis, at-que pol-lis, at-que pol-lis... cu-cu-mis,

pp

cu-cu-mis. Late-ly at the cel - e - - bra - - tion of a cresc. cresc.

spe-cial mass in hon-or of the Ho-ly Mi-thro - do - -

Digitized by Google

ra, I in-toned a psalm in the sixth li-tur-gic mode. All the while my— left-eye wan-der'd, could not keep— from-stray-ing, Steal-ing glanc-es at— my Stio-sha, who— stood close at hand, devout-ly— pray-ing.

Digitized by Google

Dear me! Fa - ther Sim-eon saw it all, Af-ter mass call'd me out in - to the hall; Then up-on my pate his Rev-'rence served a three-fold ben - e - dic-tion! Then with might and main he made me cram my head with

Lat - in gram-mar: Or-bis, am-nis et ca-na-lis, et ca-na-lis, san-guis, ung-uis et an-na-lis,

Digitized by Google

cresc.

et an-na-lis.

sf sf

mf

dim.

p

dim.

p

Thus by Sa - tan_ I___ was tempt-ed Right with - in___ the_ ho - ly tem - ple of our Lord!

mf cresc.

Am-nis et an-na-lis,

r. h.

f

cresc. ff

san-guis, un-guis et ca-na-lis, et ca-na-lis, et ca-na-lis.

mf

Digitized by Google

The Song of Khívria

The Buxom Matron

COMIC DANCE-SONG

(Little-Russian)

English version by Deems Taylor and Kurt Schindler

Music* by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1877)
Edited by A. Lyádoff

Allegretto scherzando

Rather broadly

Voice

Just look up - on me! None can de - ny my charm! Who would not love me, such a charm-ing love-bird? Who would not glad-ly seek me, when the night is fall - ing? Who would not run to meet me when the night is fall - ing?

Piano

*From the opera "The Fair of Sorótchinsk" (1877), the text adapted from the like-named tale by Gógol in his novels "Evenings at Dikánka." Khívria, the stepmother of Parásha (the heroine of Gógol's story), is a buxom matron, still far from averse to an occasional flirtation. She sings this song during the absence of her husband, the peasant Tcherevík, while she is awaiting the arrival of her lover Afanásius Ivánovitch, the pope's son, for whom she has prepared a delicious repast.

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

Andantino

rall.

When the night is fall - ing?

A tempo. Andantino cantabile

Why does my be-lov-ed not ap - pear? All the dump-lings ru-ined! All the love-ly pan-cakes grow-ing cold!

pp

pooo rall.

Andante

Ah me! Oft I wan-der'd through the fields, through the wood, through the wood,

p

Through the val-leys, o - ver moun-tains off to the fair, off to the fair!

Digitized by Google

Easter-buns I used to sell there, three a-piece, two for five. All the Cos-sacks used to buy them

p

Lento

just from me, on-ly me. Where's my la-zy lover? Still I'm wait-ing.

Moderato

più calmando e dim.

f

The dev-il take the ras-cal! Nev-er mind, I'll stop my fret-ting,

mf p

'Tis no time for griev-ing, Ra-ther let me sing! Ah!

f

pp mf

Digitized by Google

Allegretto scherzando

Since the time when first I met my Bru-de-us, Bru-de-us, I have ru-ined man-ya hand-some pair of shoes, pair of shoes. Ho, wretch-ed Bru-de-us!

f

Woe, ras-cal Bru-de-us! I am filled with in-dig-na-tion, That he had my

f

poco rall.

ad-mi-ra-tion; I de-clare, with deep de-jec-tion, I have wast-ed my af-fec-tion!

pp

poco rall.

Digitized by Google

Bru - de - us is such a dan - dy,

a tempo

Look at him! look at him! And his shin - y boots are al - ways

Neat and trim, neat and trim. Ho, fop - pish Bru - de - us!

Woe, pre - cious Bru - de - us! How I blush to think I kissed him, That I nev-er could re-sist him! I am filled with

Digitized by Google

pooo rall.

in-dig-na-tion At our for-mer os-cu-la-tion! a tempo

pooo rall.

f

a tempo

Bru-de-us is called to bat-tle, But he says he will not fight,

For he can't en-dure the rat-tle And he can-not stand the sight.

Digitized by Google

Ho, tim - id Bru - de - us! Woe, cow - ard Bru - de - us!

Would I had from thee de - part - ed, Such a lov - er chick - en - heart - ed!

pooo rall.

I am filled with in - dig - na - tion At such hor - rid tre - pi - da - tion!

pooo rall.

Meno mosso

I am told, when eve - ning falls, On some oth - er girl he calls,

Digitized by Google

pooo a pooo

Hold-ing hands and - mak-ing eyes, Boast-ing, strut-ting, tell-ing lies. Ho, fick-le

Tempo di allegretto

Bru-de-us! Woe, faith-less Bru-de-us! Where are words of in-dig-na-tion

f f

For such sheer a - bom-i - na-tion! I am through with you, my friend! Pa-tience now is at an end! Ah! No more love for me! Ha ha!

Meno mosso

f f

Digitized by Google

Revery of the Young Peasant

(Dōōmka Párobka)

English version by Sigmund Spaeth and Deems Taylor

Music* by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1877)

*From the opera "The Fair of Sorótchinsk," the text adapted from the like-named tale by Gógol (in his novels "Evenings at Dikánka"). The opera was edited, after Moussorgsky's death, by A. K. Lyádoff.—Gógol's Little-Russian story of the Sorótchinsk Fair describes the wooing of the beautiful peasant-girl Parásha by a young peasant-lad. Khívria, the girl's stepmother, plots against the suitor, and in this song he voices the apparent hopelessness of his love.— The melody of this song was also used by Moussorgsky (to describe the breaking of dawn) as the closing theme of his orchestral Fantasy "A Night on the Bald Mountain".

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

poor_heart of mine?

Is it that like me thou griev-est that fate no long-er_ smil-eth, And the road to hap-pi-ness is_ barr'd? Be si-lent now, my heart! weep-ing heart_ of mine!_

Digitized by Google

Cantabile

Sor - row, for - sake thou me! De-spair, I bid thee go! All that I

pp

long for, all my heart's de - sire, is the love of the fair Pa - rá - sha!

p

cresc.

Ah, Pa - rá - sha, my Pa - rá - sha! Thou my lit - tle dove, thou

p

cresc.

Digitized by Google

f fair-est lit-tle queen of mine! None but thy wick-ed fos - ter-moth-er tries to harm us. Still all my long - ing, all my heart's de - sire, is the love of the fair Pa - rá - sha! Heart,— why weep - est thou?

mf

p

p

pp

Why art— thou pin-ing? What can I do to com-fort thy sor-row? Heart, O my heart!

allargando

allargando

Digitized by Google

Parásha's Revery and Dance

(Dŏŏmka Parássi)

Little-Russian

English version by Deems Taylor and Kurt Schindler

Music* by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1877)

Andantino

Piano

p allarg.

a tempo allarg.

Grieve no long-er, my be - lov - ed, Griev-ing nev - er ban-ish'd sor - row;

pp

There are oth-er love-ly maid - ens Fair-er far than thy Pa - rá - sha.

* From the opera "The Fair of Sorótchinsk," the text adapted from the like-named tale by Gógol (in his novels "Evenings at Dikánka"). The opera was edited, after Moussorgsky's death, by A. K. Lyádoff- In this song Parásha, the heroine of this Little-Russian tale, contemplates the many obstacles placed between her and her lover by the intrigues of her stepmother, Khívria. Her natural gayety finally asserts itself and finds expression in a merry dance-tune, which calls up memories of the lively times on market-days.

37749

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

Ah, how I love to hear thee say: Pa-rá - sha, my lit-tle dove, espressivo

fair-est lit-tle queen of mine." Ah how I dear-ly love to see thy ten-der glance,

When be-neath thy ra - ven brows thine eyes gleam so fal - con - like!

mf

f

Digitized by Google

Nay, sor-row I must ban-ish; For de-spair I've no rea-son:

pp

I'm not old and hid-e-ous, Nay, for-sooth, I'm youth-ful and pret-ty,

Allegretto grazioso

pp

Have not lost all my charm yet! Let's dance! Hi! my young and black-eyed lov-er, sfz

pp

Stand-ing up so straight and tall, Come and tread a dain-ty mea-sure With thy sweet-heart

Digitized by Google

slim and small! Pit, pat, go the lit-tle slip-pers Of the maid-en slim and small; Click, clack, un poco cresc.

go the heav-y top-boots Of the lov-er straight and tall. Don't be gloom-y, don't be sad,

p

p

Come a-gain to - night, my lad! To_ be coy would be a sin,_ Just be bold and

cresc. poco a poco

step right in. Pit, pat, go the lit-tle slip-pers, Don't be gloom-y, don't be sad!

cresc. poco a poco

Digitized by Google

Click, clack, go the heav- y top-boots: Come a-gain to - night, my lad!

f

f

Hop! hop! Ho - pak-dance!

mf

f

f mf sempre cresc.

Hop! hop! Gay - ly prance! Pit, pat, go the lit-tle slip-pers, Let us dance the 8

mf

mf sempre cresc.

f

Ho - pak gay! Pit, pat, go the lit - tle slip - pers, This is mer - ry

8

f

Digitized by Google

Più mosso

mf

mar-ket-day! Hop! hop! Ho-pak-dance! Hi! ho! mar-ket-day!

8

mp

f

sempre cresc.

Pit, pat, lit-tle slip-pers! Hop! hop! Ho-pak gay! Pit-ter-pat!

8

mf

f

go the lit-tle slip-pers! Greet-ings to my lov-er gay! Hop! hop! Let's be mer-ry!

8

cresc.

sfz

Let us dance till break of day! Hi!

8

8 ff

sfz

Digitized by Google

The Banks of the Don

(Po nad Dónom sad tzvyetyót)

Poem by Koltzóff
English version by Deems Taylor and Kurt Schindler

Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1867)

* The Don is one of the largest rivers of Southern Russia; it empties at Rostóv into the Sea of Azóv.

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

Scherzando

Have mine eyes be-held the scene. There àt_ eve fair_ pp sf p

Ma - sha pass'd me, From_ the well re - turn - ing,

Smil - ing up with bash - ful glanc - es,

pp l.h. sf

HARVARD UNIVERSITY
EDA KUHN LOEB MUSIC LIBRARY
CAMBRIDGE 38, MASS.

Digitized by Google

Cheeks with blush - es burn - - ing.

l. h.

pp sf

p

Shy - ly she'd re - turn my greet - ing

pp

pp poco rit.

In the sun - set's glow - ing.

poco rit.

Digitized by Google

p a tempo, tranquillo

Once she ab - sent - ly tipp'd her wa - ter - jar,

a tempo, tranquillo

Spilt it— o - ver - flow - ing.— By the Don a—p

pp

1 2 3 4 1 2 3 4

l. h.

sf

p sf

flow'r - y lane— Pass - es— thro' my gar - den....

pp

pp poco sf

ppp

Digitized by Google

On the River Dnyéper

(Na Dnyepryé)

From the Little-Russian poem*
"The Haïdamaks," by T. G. Shevtchénko
English version by Geo. Harris, Jr.

Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky
Composed 1866, revised in 1880

Largamente

Voice

Piano

Dnye - per, ho! — Dnye - per, hark! — Dnye-per, my broad riv - er! —

Dnye-per, my deep riv - er! — You've borne the red blood of Cos - - sacks

* The Dnyéper is – after the Volga – the largest river of Russia. It rises near Smolénsk, flows through Kieff and Yekaterínoslav, and empties into the Black Sea. The Poles have been the traditional enemies of the Cossacks through many centuries.

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

On your long, wind - ing course to_ the far dis. - tant sea._____

mf

On - ly_ was_the sea_ nev-er sat-is - fied, ne'er sat-is - fied. To - p

f

mf

pp

Allegro risoluto

day you are wait-ing, to - day you are wait - ing,_ My Dnye-per so

pp broad. To - day God pre - pares for U - kraï - na its feast - ing, Its

f

pp

Digitized by Google

cresc.

feast - ing so fright - ful, For flow - ing, flow - ing is

cresc.

f blood in great_ tor-rents, The Cos - sack re - vives; The Het - man a - ris - es in gar - ments re - splen - dent, Once more comes the day when U - kraï - na shall live. And

Digitized by Google

far o'er the steppe on the graves* of our broth - ers The foe - men shall fall 'neath the gleam of our blades. A - new shall the Cos - sack sing his song free - ly, Un - fet - ter'd and

f bold-ly in praise of U - kraï - na: "Our land shall be free to the sea of

ff

* Literally translated, the original poem refers to the "Kurgáni," the tumulus-shaped burial-mounds of the Cossacks.

Digitized by Google

Pol - ish and Jew - ish blood! Down the riv - er float___ now bones___ of our en - e-mies, Blood___ of___ Pol - ish vic-tims, blood___ of___ Jew - ish vic - tims, Now flows down the riv - er feed - - ing the sea!___

Digitized by Google

Largamente

f

p

Dnye - per, halt! Dnye - per, hark!

fp

pp

mf

Soon will be thy vic - to - ry, soon wilt thou be qui - et - ed!

p

p

Dnye - per, halt! O my riv - - - er

pp

deep!

pp

Digitized by Google

Death's Lullaby

(Koluibélnaya)

English version* by Deems Taylor and Kurt Schindler

Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1875)

Lento doloroso

Voice

Piano

pp

mf

Faint-ly the child sighs.

p

The

sf

p

pp

lamp dim-ly flick-ers, Sheds but a phan-tom of light;

poco rit.

poco rit.

* After the poem by Count A. Golénishtcheff-Kutōozoff (No. 2 of "Songs and Dances of Death").
No. 1 of this cycle, "Trepak", is to be found in "A Century of Russian Song", collected and edited by Kurt Schindler, published by G. Schirmer, New York, 1911.

27749

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

a tempo

Rock - ing the cra - dle, the pale, wear-y moth - er Waits thro' the

a tempo

poco rit.

long, sleep-less night.

Moderato tranquillo

pp

Ear - ly at break of day

poco rit.

dim.

pp

a mezza voce

comes, soft - ly knock - ing, Death, all - com - pas - sion - ate:

f agitato

dim.

"Hark!" Trem - bling, she starts, gaz - ing anx - ious-ly round her....

sf cresc.

poco dim.

Digitized by Google

Lento funesto

"Fear not, O moth-er, the dark! See, now the pale morn looks in at thy win-dow;

p sf

accel.

Man - y the tears thou hast shed, Wear - y thy vi - gils. So

sfp

rest now, I pray thee, I will keep watch in thy stead.

Vain - ly thou seek - est the dear one to qui - et;

Digitized by Google

cantab. rall.

Soft - er and sweet - er sing I!"–

rall.

Agitato patetico

pp

"Si - lence! In fe - ver my

pp

lit - tle one toss - es,

Torn is my heart with his

Lento funesto

cry!" "Nay, but with me he will soon cease to

allargando

suf-fer. Lul-la-by, lul-la-by-bye."–

p

Agitato

"Wax - white his cheeks now, his breast faint - ly fal - ters –

pp

Digitized by Google

Lento tranquillo

Be still, and stand not so nigh!"– "Good is the to - ken; his strug-gles are

p

allargando

Agitato

end-ing. Lul - la - by, lul - la - by - bye."– "Go, thou ac-curs - ed one! Foul thy ca -

allargando

sf sf pp

Lento tranquillo

con dolore dim.

ress - es! Touch not my child, lest he die!"– "No! 'Tis a comfort-ing dream I shall

p

Digitized by Google

allargando

Agitato, con dolore

waft him; Lul - la - by, lul - la - by - bye."- "Cease now thy ter - ri - ble song!

allargando

cresc.

Lento tranquillo

grant me mer - cy! Canst thou my plead - ing de - ny?" "Look ye!

dim.

rall.

My singing has lull'd him to slum - ber. Lul - la - by, lul - la - by - bye."

p

pp

Digitized by Google

Death's Serenade

(Serenáda)

English version* by Deems Taylor and Kurt Schindler

Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1875)

Larghetto

Voice

Piano

Sweet - scent - ed breath of Night, soft and ca - ress - ing, Trem - bling blue twi - light of June.....

cresc.

Bow - ing her head on her bo - som, the

dim.

maid - en Heark - - ens to Night's gen-tle croon.

dim.

* After the poem by Count A. Golénishtcheff-Kutőőzoff (No.3 of "Songs and Dances of Death").

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

cresc.

Sleep will not come to her eyes, bright with fe - ver;

dim.

Life calls in vain to the

p maid; Un - der her win - dow, in si - lence of

cresc.

dim. e rall.

mid - night, Death sings a grim ser-e - nade:

sf

rall.

Digitized by Google

Andantino

"Lone - ly and fet - ter'd, in dark - ness of bond - age,

Youth now is fad - ing from thee; Roam - ing as er - rant knight vest - ed with ma - gic pow'r, I come thy young soul to free.

Raise thee and look in thy glass: Ah, what

Digitized by Google

cresc. dim. cresc.

beau - ty Lim - pid - ly glows in thy face! Ros - y thy cheeks are; thy shim - mer-ing tress - es, Cloud - like,thy bod - y em-brace.

dim.

p pooo capriccioso

Clear___ is the gleam of thine eyes blue and lam - bent,

Bright_____ as the glow of_ the sky;_

Digitized by Google

Sweet wafts thy fragrant breath, warm as the

mf sf sf pp

noon - tide, Ma - gic thy charm draws me nigh. Soon must thou pooo accel. a tempo, tranquillo

a tempo

ppp pooo accel. p sf

yield to the spell of my sing - ing,

sf

Now thy true gal - lant is near; Heed - ing thy call he is

f mf

Digitized by Google

com - ing to claim—— thee. Lo! the su - preme hour is here!

pp

pp

Dain - ty thy form,— so enchant-ing thy trembling!

2 Ped.

Oh! thou shalt swoon and de - cline Under my kisses!— Dost hear what I

cresc. dim.

ppp parlando whis - per? Lis - ten!.... Lie still!.... Thou art mine!"—

f

ppp

ff sf

Digitized by Google

Death, the Commander

(Polkovódyetz)

English version* by
Geo. Harris, Jr.

Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1877)

Vivo, alla guerra

Voice

Piano

With crash of bat - tle, ar - - - mor gleam - - ing, The can - - nons bel - low forth their

* After the poem by Count A. Golénishtcheff-Kutōōzoff (No. 4 of "Songs and Dances of Death")

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

fire, And men take flight, their hors - - es sf mf

steam - - ing And stum - bling thro' the blood - y

sf

mire. With glare of mid - day

sf

f

8

bat - - tle rag - - es; The

f

Digitized by Google

sun is sink - - - ing, still they fight;

The twi - - - light dark - ens, but en - ga - ges The foe to mer - - - - - - ci - less new spite.

But night has rall. pesante

dim.

Digitized by Google

risoluto

fall'n, and all is end - ed, The hosts a - sun-der have been driv'n. Then silence,- pp pp f

mf

from the un - be - friend-ed Unheed-ed groanings rise to heav'n. Then pp cresc. dim.

Grave, marziale

by the moon il - lu - mi-nat - ed, His bones all glit-t'ring white and stark, As

p

cap - tain of the hosts in - stat - ed, There rides forth Death.-

f f f fp

Digitized by Google

p

Lo! in the dark He heeds the sob - bing and the

pp

pray - - ing, Un-til his pride is sat - is - fied,

risoluto

Then, on the spot of cru - el slay - ing, He walks a - bout with sol - emn

pp

stride. Then on a hil-lock, light-ed dim - ly, He looks a-round him, fp

p

Digitized by Google

smil - ing grim - ly, Then o'er the bat-tle's si - lent ground He sends his pp poco cresc.

voice with fate - ful sound: "Mine is the bat - tle! All wrongs are right - ed,

f f

Foe - man and friend shall to me bow the head! Those who were en - e - mies, dolce p

I have u - nit - ed: Rise now, to pass the re - view of the dead!

cresc. poco f

Digitized by Google

March by me sol - emnly, greet your command - er! I shall account for you

f all, friends and foes; Cool is the ground, and the dark beckons yon - der,

mf f p

Soft - ly from life you shall sink to re - pose. Years shall in - vi - si - bly

poco meno mosso

poco meno mosso

change in - to a - ges, Soon will be gone the re - mem - brance of you;

Digitized by Google

a tempo, pomposo

I shall re-call you, when war no more rag - es, Bid you at mid - night to

a tempo

f

meno mosso

sol - emn re-view. Danc-ing with heav - y step, till I grow wear - y, meno mosso

p marcato

poco rall.

I'll stamp the earth, that hence - forth in this drear-y Grave-yard your bones shall for-

poco rall.

ff allargando

molto rit.

ev - er be bound, That you shall nev - er rise up from the ground!

f allargando

molto rit.

f

Digitized by Google

The Song of Solomon

(Yevréiskaya Pyésnya)

Poem by L. Mey
English version by Deems Taylor and Kurt Schindler

Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1867)
(after an original Jewish melody)

Andante appassionato

Voice

Piano

p p pp

As the wild rose am I, as the lil - y of the field;

mf

p

2 Ped.

f

She, my snow-y-breast-ed dove, lit - tle dove of mine, Shin-eth

p

sf cresc. f p pp

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

fair midst her sis-ters as a-mong thorns the lil-y. Oh my

cresc.

Meno mosso

white-breast-ed dove, lit-tle dove of mine! As the fair myr-tle-tree,

a tempo

l.h.

sweet with fra-grant spice, 'Mongst the bar-ren trees that

cresc.

Digitized by Google

with-er in the for-est, Shin - eth my well - be - lov - ed 'midst the host of less - er men, the youth of Is - ra - el. Where-fore hid - est thou, my

p pp

p

Meno mosso

f

cresc.

p f

2 Ped.

beau - ti - ful?

a tempo

pp ppp

2 Ped.

Digitized by Google

Silently Floated a Spirit

(Górnimee tikho letyéla dooshá nyebesámi)

Poem by Count Alexis K. Tolstóï
English version by Geo. Harris, Jr.

Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1877)

Sostenuto, Lamentoso, Mistico

Voice

Piano

p

Si - lent - ly float - ed a

8 tremolando

ppp

spir - it a - cross the high heav - ens, Low - er - ing earth-ward her

8 eye-lids in sor-row - ful dreaming; From them there fell to the

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

earth the pure tear-drops of sor - row, Like to a chain of bright stars were they, end - less and gleam-ing. Meet - ing her, soft - ly the

ppp

oth - er stars ask'd of their sis - ter:

pp

"For what de - spair from thine eyes flow the

pp

Digitized by Google

tear - drops so burn - ing?" Then did she con espress.

an - swer and say: "Lo, my thought turn - eth earth - ward;

sf p

pooo rit.

Might I for - get what I've left there of suf-f'ring and yearn-ing!

pp

pooo rit.

p a tempo

Here is no light but the light of the joy of the right - eous,

a tempo

pp

Digitized by Google

Here is no an - ger nor grief in the heav - en - ly cit - y.

8

f

Oh, send me down a - gain earth-ward, Cre - a - tor, I pray Thee,

sf

p pocо rit.

That I may find there some soul that needs com-fort and pit - y!"

pocо rit.

pp

ppp

Digitized by Google

The Doll's Cradle-Song

(S' Kŏ̆ŏ̆kloi)

Dedicated to my children, Tániushka and Góga

No. 4 of the cycle
"The Child's Nursery"*

English version by
Deems Taylor and Kurt Schindler

Words and Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky

Andante
Voice
Piano
p
Tia-pa, bye - bye,_ Tia-pa, sleep and dream, Sand-man soon is com-ing round. Tia-pa, sleep, dol-ly! Tia-pa, sleep and dream!
p
Boo-gie-man will catch you, Moth-er witch will scratch you, Broth-er wolf will snatch you!
un poco
sf

* Another song from this same cycle, "The Beetle" is to be found in "A Century of Russian song", collected and edited by Kurt Schindler, published by G. Schirmer, N. Y. 1911.

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

Tia - pa, go to sleep!

p

2 Ped.

Then to - mor - row tell me What you have been dream - ing:

Of won - drous is - lands Free from work and wor - ry,

cresc.

Digitized by Google

Where the trees are glow - ing Filled with pears of am - ber,

mf

Where in nests of sil - ver Gold - en birds are sing - ing.

dim. p dim.

5

Bye - bye, lul - la - by! Bye-bye, Tia-pa!

p pp

Digitized by Google

Night

A PHANTASY

(Notch. Fantásia)

English version by
Geo. Harris, Jr., and Kurt Schindler

Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1864)

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

When falls the hour of si - lence.

dim. ppp

I hear theewhis - per-ing; Thy mur - mur'd words that flow up - on mineear, Likecrys - tal foun-tains, in the si - lence of night are

Digitized by Google

cresc.

float - ing o'er me, All full of hope, all full of com - fort,

cresc.

All full of strength, and

mf

ma - - gic - al ful - fil - ment

pp

Digitized by Google

and ob - liv - ion.

dim.

ppp

p

When night is dark,

when mid - night sounds,

Digitized by Google

thine eyes are shin - ing close be - fore my gaze;

cresc.

dimin.

Ah! they seem to smile at me, and, lo! I hear thee soft - ly

Digitized by Google

p

say: My love! my heart's own

pp

pp friend! I love thee so! My

pp

rit.

heart is thine!

a tempo

rit.

pp

ppp dim.

Digitized by Google

In My Attic

(V' tchetuiryókh styenákh)

English version* by Deems Taylor and Kurt Schindler

Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1874)

Andante tranquillo

Voice

Piano

pp

Lone is my lit - tle room, si - lent and dear to me,

Deep shad - ows hov - er there, grey and im - mov - a - ble.—

cresc. dim.

Scene of my rev - er - ies, home of my thren - o - dies,

cresc. dim.

* After the poem by Count A. Golénishtcheff-Kutóozoff, in his cycle "Without Sunlight" (No. 1)

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

High as - pi - ra - tions, and hopes of my in - most heart.

Mo-ments of rap-ture that flick - er and die a-gain; Brief, fleet - ing glanc - es of

l.h.

far - dis - tant hap - pi-ness; Doubt and un - cer - tain-ty, sor-row and suf - fer - ing:

Meno mosso e tranquillo

Such are my lone - ly nights there, in my lit - tle room.

pp

Digitized by Google

After Years

(Menyá tui v'tolpyé nye ōōznála)

English version* by Deems Taylor and Kurt Schindler

Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1874)

Andante con moto

Voice

Piano

Last night, in the crowd, you ig - nored me; Your eyes gave no sign that they saw; But once more en - snared by your glanc - es, I trem-bled with ter - ror and awe. It

*After the poem by Count A. Golénishtcheff-Kutōōzoff, in his cycle "Without Sunlight" (No. 2)

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

cresc.

was but one flash of re-mem-brance, But in it came back thro' the years

pp

cresc.

f

All mad - ness of pas - sion long van - ish'd, All

l.h.

f

dim.

sor - row of part - ing and tears!

p

dim.

pp

Digitized by Google

Retrospect

(Okóntchen prázdnui, shōōmnui dyen)

English version* by Deems Taylor and Kurt Schindler

Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1874)

Moderato assai

Voice

Piano

The vain and nois - y day is done; Un - eas - y toil now ends in dream - ing. Deep si - lence.— Shad - ows of the night Per - vade the cit - y wrapt in slum-ber. But sleep comes not to soothe mine eyes. Now breaks a f p pp mf

* After the poem by Count A. Golénishtcheff-Kutōōzoff, in his cycle "Without Sunlight" (No. 3)

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

mys - tic dawn with - in me; Im - a - gi - na-tion glanc-es back To scan the book of years long

pp

van - ish'd. As if a - new my soul were filled With pa - gan Spring's en - rap - tured vi - sions, Be - fore my spir - it

poco rit.

floats a train Of hopes, of yearn-ings, fleet - ing fol - lies.... A - pp poco rit.

Digitized by Google

a tempo

las! what phan-tom-world is this? I wear - y 'mid the host that haunts me, And

a tempo

p

what their fu - tile voic - es tell Has lost the ma-gic that en-thrall'd me. Of Andante cantabile

all the shad - ows on - ly one, By faith il - lum - in'd, stands be-fore me, And

l.h.

pp

Digitized by Google

poco rit.

she_ who loved me long_ a - go Now soft - ly bends a - bove_ my pil - low. And

poco rit.

a tempo p f dim.

once_ a - gain_ my spir - it stirs, And once_ a - gain_ my soul sur - ren - ders.

a tempo f p dim.

pp f rit.

My tears are fall - ing, tears of rap - ture, Un - heed - ed tears of mys - tic joy._

pp sf p rit. pp

Digitized by Google

Resignation

(Skootcháï)

English version* by Deems Taylor and Kurt Schindler

Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1874)

Andantino comodo assai e poco lamentoso

Voice

Piano

Re-sign! Thou art but born to wear - y. He knows not joy, whose heart is dead; Re - turn but glad-dens af - ter part - ing; Who would pre-vail, must ban - ish dread.

p sf cresc.

f

* After the poem by Count A. Golénishtcheff-Kutóozoff, in his cycle "Without Sunlight" (No.4)

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

Meno mosso

Re-sign, re - sign! But faint - ly—

p

p

sound— with - in thee The call of love, the— voice of truth; With

ly - ing greet - ing dost thou an-swer The vir - gin dreams— of ea-ger youth.

poco rall.

mf

poco rall. pp

Digitized by Google

a tempo senza espressione

Re - sign! With - in pre - des - tined cir - cles From a tempo

mf p

birth to death, thou art not free, While drop by drop thy for - ces van - ish,

pp

Till thou shalt die.... God's peace to thee! God's peace to thee!

p poco rall. a tempo

Digitized by Google

Elegy

(Elégia)

English version* by Deems Taylor and Kurt Schindler

Music by
Modest P. Moussorgsky (1874)

Andantino mosso
Voice
Piano
pp Deep shad - ows veil the night.
Be - yond the cloud - y haze A
pp pale and si - lent star is gleam - ing, dim and lone - ly; And

*After the poem by Count A. Golénishtcheff-Kutoözoff, in his cycle "Without Sunlight" (No. 5)

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

faint and far I hear the mourn - ful tink-ling on - ly Of

Ped. Ped. Ped. Ped.

bells, where dis - tant hors - es graze. Like rall. f

dim. e rall.

Allegro agitato

storm - y clouds of night my in - most thoughts are surg - ing; In

mf

fleet - ing forms they drift, my trou - bled soul sub - mer - ging With

Digitized by Google

vi - sions from the past, with ghost - ly hopes and fears Once real to me, but long since van - ish'd with the years.

p

They speak of wear - i-ness and weep - ing.... Un-

Digitized by Google

Andantino mosso

poco meno mosso e cantabile

bid - den fan-cies rise with nev - er aim or end: Some - times their form re - calls a

p

poco meno mosso e cantabile

f

well - be - lov - ed friend, E - vok - ing from the past the thoughts that long lay sleep - ing,—A

Allegro non troppo

mys - tic world of shades and fears up - on me creep - ing. My

mf

tim - id spir - it shrinks from thoughts of fu - ture strife. Me -

Digitized by Google

thinks I hear a - far the clash - ing

f

din of life; The heart - less world that mocks, vile trea - sons that op - press me; The irk - some pet - ti - ness of tri - fles that ob - sess me, The rall.

f p rall.

Digitized by Google

dim. e rit.

great sad bell of Death..... The nf sfp sfp dim. e rit. pooo a pooo fp sfpp

(con 2 Pedali)

Andantino mosso

morn-ing-star's white flame Grows faint-er, o-ver-come with shame. She hides her vir-gin face in

pp joy-less mists of morn-ing, A sym-bol of my fate, a dumb and sol-emn warn-ing.

The sixth and last song, belonging to this cycle, "Without Sunlight", is to be found in "A Century of Russian Song", collected and edited by Kurt Schindler, published by G. Schirmer, New York, 1911 (page 102-107)

Digitized by Google

CONSECRATION

The Hallelujah of Love

(Allelúia Lubvēē)

English version by Deems Taylor and
Kurt Schindler

Music by Modest P. Moussorgsky
From the opera "Khovánshtchina" Arranged for concert-performance by Kurt Schindler

Molto moderato

Voice

Piano

f p

p pp p espress.

Fa-ther! love is my on-ly sin. Fain would I bring his_ pp sosten.

p

soul sal-va-tion ere he dies. With him I do not fear to meet my des-ti-ny.

cresc.

p

Copyright, 1917, by G. Schirmer

Digitized by Google

For - give me, Lord! Bless me with Thy mer - cy and strengthen me!

f l. h. l. h. dim. l. h. l. h. pp

Ped. Ped.

mf rall.

Largo (♩= 48)

Now my heart re-calls the first bright hour of love; Won-drous vi-sions since

pp

then have I be-held. Dark thro' my dreams appear'd the fear lest he prove un-true;

Digitized by Google

Larghetto (♩= 52)

Black thoughts like an-gry clouds of mid-night hung o-ver me.

p

(appassionato)

Love has been tor-ment and sor-row to_ me, Day or night my_ an-guish'd

pp

simile

soul found no_ rest, For me-seem'd as if the will of_ God I transgress'd, That my love was a sin a-gainst His ho-ly_ law. Fa-ther, if I_ have sinn'd,

p

Digitized by Google

if wicked was my_ love, Spare not Thy child, spare not Thine erring child! Oh, take me hence, and

pp

may my bod - y_die, So that by death my soul may be re - deem-ed!

sfz p

ten.

Ah,_ those burn-ing nights when first_ he spoke to me, dolce

ten.

Soft - ly whisp'ring of his

pp

love and my hap-pi-ness! Now has our love been shrouded dark - ly in_ sombre clouds,

p

Digitized by Google

Now has the i - cy hand of Fate_ gripp'd our hearts, Now, be-hold, the hour of_

r.h.

espress.

death is at_hand, My be - lov - ed, I bid thee now a_ last fare-well. Hal-le-

l.h.

lu - jah! Hal - le - lu - jah! Hal-le - lu - jah! Hal - le - lu - jah!

dim.

pp dolciss.

3

3 p

pp

smorzando

* For concert-performances the air can finish here.

Digitized by Google

(The Funeral Pyre)

Tempo di Marcia funebre (♩= 66)

Hark! Dost thou hear, a - far be - yond the for - est,

mf p

Clash and din of arms that pro - claim the hosts approach-ing? Lost! all is lost!

Ped. Ped. Ped. Ped.

See, they sur-round us! No - where to hide us, no - where sal-va-tion!

Ped. Ped. Ped. Ped.

'Twas Fate her-self that weld - ed close our lives to-geth - er; Now we must die, the

pp cresc.

Digitized by Google

voice of Doom has spo-ken! No tears a-vail, nor an-y sigh-ing or_ reproach-es; The pp cresc.

rit. Largo (come prima)

hour now has struck, the hour of con-se-cra-tion_ Ah!_ my heart re-calls the rit.

pp misterioso

dolce

first bright hour of love! Ah!_ those burning nights of love and hap-pi-ness!

pp

In fier-y fur-naces shall our love_ be tem-pered for aye!

ppp

mp sostenuto

smorzando

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Mus 546 .3 .8
Masters of Russian song
Loeb Music Library
AMO5645
3 2044 040 682 833

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google